The Porsche Carrera Cup championship goes live

Livio Selva, sponsored by Nova Systems, is competing for MICHELIN CUP classification

The bond between Nova Systems and motor racing becomes ever stronger. After sponsoring the Ebimotors team of Livio Selva, who won the Targa Tricolore Porsche in the 2014 GT Open Cup trophy, took overall third place in the Italian Gran Turismo Championship and the title of best gentlemen driver 2015, this year the Information Communication Technology company is sponsoring the same team in the Porsche Carrera Cup, the sports event that is celebrating its first decade by rewarding drivers and fans with an exciting new format: no longer just 14 but as many as 21 races over 7 weekends on the most prestigious Italian racetracks. In addition to the participation of single drivers, which has always marked the Porsche brand, the cars can be shared by two drivers, each of whom will compete in a 25' + 1 lap sprint race and then share the wheel during a mini endurance race of 45' + 1 lap, which will be contested on Sunday.

Livio Selva of Ebimotors will be competing for the MICHELIN CUP classification dedicated to gentlemen drivers. "I am very pleased and excited," said Selva, "about competing as part of the Ebimotors team in the Porsche Carrera Cup Italy championship. We are beginning the season late, without having run a test, but racing with Ebimotors gives me a great sense of security; I am certain that their experience and professionalism will allow me to give my best. I thank the team and my sponsors for this opportunity". The competition is going live: the next race is scheduled at the Mugello circuit on July 16 and 17. All the races will be broadcast on live television on DMAX (digital terrestrial channel 52/SKY platform 136/Tivù Sat 26) as well as via direct global streaming on the website www.carreracupitalia.it.
